NEW BOOKS, ETC.

THE SEACOAST. By W. H. Wheeler, M. Inst., C.E. New York, London and Bombay: Longmans, Green & Co. 1902. 8vo. Pp. xii, 352.

The author having directed his attention for several years to the subject of coast destruction, littoral drift, and the various means pursued in protecting the coast, has had opportunities of becoming acquainted with the various means that have been pursued to prevent the destruction of beaches and to protect sea walls and other defenses. The purpose of the book is not to advocate any special system of coast protection, but to offer such information as to the varying geological and tidal conditions attaching to the sea-coast, and the result of protective works carried out under different degrees of exposure, as may be of service to those having charge of protective works or interested in the destruction and preservation of land bordering on the sea.

PANTELEGRAPHY. A Universal Language and a Universal Code Suitable for all Branches of Industrial Commerce. A System Profitable to Telegraph Corporations and Economical to Their Patrons. By A. C. Baronio, Sec. Pape. New York and London: Pantelegraphy Publishing Company. Brown & McElrath, Agents, 168 Reade Street, New York. 1902. Quarto. Pp. 273.

There is an undeniable necessity for a special method applicable equally to all languages, whose purpose shall be to convey concise ideas rather than a superfluity of words, and capable of expressing everything with the greatest possible ease and rapidity. Mr. Baronio has been wise enough to build up his system in such a manner that it cannot be much affected by any change in the mode of transmission. The book comes to us as the fulfillment of a promise made in 1880. It comes late, but is none the less welcome.

The general system of Pantelegraphy covers two branches, namely, a code that may be automatically transmitted by telegraph or telephone, and a set of instruments adapted to the application of the same. This book treats of only the first branch.

"Sec. Pape" as presented here is a specimen of a commercial code especially suitable for all branches of trade and industry. The system is compact and absolutely secret so far as we can see.
